7 - Pre-formatted Internet links - MEDLINEplus

Thus far, we have been using exclusively, the MEDLINE system of the National Library of Medicine. You would be well served if you were to do nothing more than stay within MEDLINE and become adept at its various retrievals.

However, having grounded oneself in that primary source of scientific information in the bio-medical sciences, we will now start to branch out to other sources on the Internet. We will use MEDLINEplus as a gateway. Again, MEDLINE is a component of the National Library of Medicine, and the library produces various informational “products”; one of which is an expert organization of worthwhile links to various Internet sites on particular medical topics. This is MEDLINEplus, and it is oriented mostly toward informing patients or “consumers” of medicine. From your browser, log to [http://medlineplus.gov].

This takes you to the home page. Note - NLM retains the older procedure of providing a "Text version" of the site, which can be a nice feature - simpler and faster.
Various features are available; and you will want to explore each. Select the appropriate category for the information which you desire. Health Topics is the section which deals with medical problems. Also, you may search the site by key word.
In the Health Topics section, you may search for your subject by key word, by alphabetical listing, or by Broad Groups. Once you find the specific sector which pertains to your interest and if it will be of continuing interest to you, bookmark the URL (using your browser function or Ctrl-D) so that you may return periodically to see current revisions.

MEDLINEplus is being expanded continuously; and if your medical concern is not listed, check back at a later date or send an e-mail to the library and request that they compile resources about your concern. There is a request feature on the site.
If you were looking for information on Addison's Disease, then you could have selected the "A" sector and found the link to your subject “Addison's Disease.”
This takes you to a very extensive page with links to various Internet sites that pertain to Addison's Disease.
